Cabinet Member Finds Two Tons Lost in Mining Three -Overcompetition Blamed

Recurring coal strikes—such as the one which has been under way for six months in a large section of the American bituminous fields—are a challenge to the Nation to remove fundamentally unsatisfactory conditions in one of its key industries. To contribute to a better understanding of these problems, The Christian Science Montron is publishing a series of articles, discussing the underlying problems in this industry, of which the following is the third.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The American coal problem boils down to a matter of conservation. The Nation's soft coal mines, the richest in the world, are now being wastefully exploited. Of this there can be no question, for Government figures and official statements prove it.

A Cabinet officer declares that two tons of soft coal are now left in the ground, and lost, for each three tons extracted. This would be a loss of over 250,000,000 tons a year. Wasteof the chronic industrial strife in the Such is the information disclosed to-

Why, it is asked, if conservation would benefit all parties, employers, labor and the public alike, is it not practiced? The answer is a paradox: because this kind of economy is too expensive. It is cheaper to "skim the cream" of the national heritage than to go slowly and carefully. than to go slowly and carefully. There is intense competition in the industry, and coal is found widely scattered. In some places steam shovels can strip the coal bare. There is so much coal, and it is so

FRANCE TO JOIN ARTIFICIAL SILK INDUSTRY TRUST

Decision to Participate in International Accord Is Reported in Paris

BY CABLE FROM MONITOR BEREAU PARIS, Oct. 28-The international shortly be extended by the participaof the chronic industrial strife in the industry. The strike now under way is an illustration. The miners' union asks a daily wage of $7.50. German miners work nine hours daily for $1.35. But the American miner averages, according to official figures, only two days' work out of each three possible working days

In 1924 the average wage for all American soft coal miners was only $1125. In many cases wages were close to, or below, the subsistence level, due to irregularity. In turn, irregularity was due to glutted markets caused by overproduction. And this brings the vicious sequence back full circle to the start—lack of conservation.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 28 (P)—Warning to Ex-Grown Prince Carol and his adherents that Rumania will not tolerate any conspiracy against the State was given by the Premier, Ion C. Bratianu, in an address before a crowded Chamber of Deputies last

"Rumania does not want and will not have an elected head of the State," the Premier declared in discussing Carol's recent statement that he would return to Bucharest to take his place as king if called by the nation.

The Premier's exposition of the iynastic situation and his defense of dynastic situation and his defense of the measures taken by his Government during the past few days to thwart any attempt by Carol to obtain the throne was replied to by Julia Maniu, leader of the National Peasants' Party, who defended Carol and challenged the Premier's course of action as being contrary to the sovereignty of Rumania.

King Michael, Mr. Bratianu declared that the fate of the Rumanian crown could not be left to the caprice of any individual or party.

mines. The 338 shipping mines operated, on an average during the year, only 139 days. The rest of the time the miners were, of course, idle and without pay. Furthermore, only 55 per cent of the mines really did work for even the average of 139 days. At least 10 per cent operated for only 60 days during the year. Yet if the largest 34 of these 338 mines in Illinois had been operated for 300 days during the year (the approximate annual number of working days, exclusive of Sundays and The 338 shipping mines ing days, exclusive of Sundays and holidays) they would have produced well in excess of what all the shipping lines did produce. Working full time they could have met all the State's requirements. The meaning of this is that the other 253 mines were economically unnecessary. In this single State all but 84 mines represented, as capital invested, an unnecessary expenditure of money. Furthermore, the surplus mines kept the rest from enjoying continuity of operation with a fair annual wage for their men. The only commentary on this situation needed is that the labor turnover in the Illinois coal fields for the year was 85 per cent.

An Operator's Experience

A typical operator described his view of the situation recently after explaining his own case. He had opened his mine and made preparations for careful exploitation of thick and thin seams of coal alike along lines of conservation. Shortly after, a mine opened close beside him that took none of these precautions, but stripped its shaft of the richest coal, underbid him in market, and then ble with the whole soft coal industry is that there is so much coal, and it is so easy to reach! Why, it is scattered through a dozen different states. A billion-dollar trust couldn't control production. Henry Ford couldn't do it. Nobody could. The United States possesses one-half of the known coal reserves of the earth. Yes, sir, one-half of all the soft coal there is is in this country; the Brit ish Empire has another quarter of it, and the last quarter is scatter-

"Private parties can't control a sit-uation like that. The biggest trust is automatically ruled out. There will never be a Rockefeller in the soft coal business. When people talk about coal barons they probably mean the anthracite field, which is quite a different matter. coal barons are 'barren' in only one

The United States Coal Commission was sufficiently impressed by the lack of a united front on the part of operators to advise more comprebensive organization and a common bensive organization and a common policy in dealing with the union. Perhaps the greatest difficulty lies in the differences within the National Coal Association. For example, one faction regards the union as a permanent feature, while the other expects the "union will be permanently test out of the permanently test out of the permanently test out of the permanently that out of the permanently is a permanent of the permanently that out of the permanently is a permanent of the pe

Telegrams of con-gratulation are pouring in to cab-inet ministers and the leader of the country.

January will be one of the most important political meetings ever held in America, according to Dr. Joe Manuel Cortina, president of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Cuban Senate and Cuban delegate to the League of Nations, in New York on his return to Havana from the league meeting in Geneva.

"The unanimity of the countries of the Americas in the conference will undoubtedly constitute a remarkable step toward solidarity and harmony among all the countries of the Western continents," he said.

Dr. Cortina declared that the League meeting just held in Geneva and the forthcoming Havana meeting will mark the beginning of an important period of political advancement and harmony between the nations of the Western Hemisphere. "The League of Nations," he added, "has ceased to be a political institution that might easily disappear and has become the center of geonomic social and political evolutions. country.

AUSTRALIANS ACT AGAINST LEGAL GAMBLING

Objection Raised to Profit on Vice Being Made by Government

ADELAIDE, S. Aust. (Special Corespondence)-There is a movement foot in South Australia to license okmakers, another evil against which social reformers are resolutely setting their faces. South Australia, with the rest of the states, already has the legal totalizator where, however, persons under 21 years of age are prohibited from investing. From the total receipts the Government takes a commission of 5 per cent, and the racing clubs 7½ per cent. There have long been objections to the State taking the proceeds of organized gambling, but the fact that last year a revenue of £78,261 was received from this source may be an explanation of its determination to countenance the machine. Totalizator receipts in 1926 reached £1,565,212, and yet the proposal is being advanced to legalize bookmakers. The Council of Churches has written to the Premier maintaining that it is the function of the Government to discourage such a system. The expentitive control of Council of which social reformers are resolutely discourage such a system. The ex-ecutive committee of the Council of Churches has been empowered to watch developments and, in con-junction with kindred organizations, to engage in active hostile propa-

The Premier, Richard L. Butler, regards the granting of a 44-hour week by the federal arbitration court as the most severe blow ever dealt at industry. The Government has no at industry. The Government has no intention of reducing wages, but hopes to obtain the co-operation of its employees in an effort toward greater efficiency and production by the adoption of a system of payment by results. He said they must choose the adoption of a system of payment by results. He said they must choose between reducing expenses and increasing production, and he had appealed to the whole of the people to choose the later alternative. Unless they were prepared to produce more, a financial crisis might result. Part

Opal Digging Flourishes

These are not primitive dwellings, but are fitted up in a most ingenious manner with furniture and equipment adapted to the limited space underground. The appreciation of domestic money is amazing, but the essence of comfort is invented in the above.

There are at present about 70 men working on the field, and the latest reports are that rich deposits of opal are being brought to the surface. One piece of opal unearthed scaled 55 ounces, another 12 ounces and a cou-

SPECIAL FROM MONIFOR BUREAU

WASHINGTON—John Van A. Macher to this ambitious government an exclusive Minister of Agriculture. The wheat crop is South Australia's most important staple product, and the main source of wealth. It is capable of very great expansion, both in acreage under crop and in average yield an acre before the limits of production are approached.

Dr. A. E. V. Richardson, Director of the Waite Agricultural Research Institute, says competent authorities estimate that the area of land suited for wheat culture is at least 16,000,000 acres. It is reasonable to expect that of that area 4,000,000 acres will ultimately be sown each year to wheat. The present yield per acre averages 12½ bushels. It may readily be raised permanently to 15 bush—els per acre. That will give a total LAW KNOWLEDGE the present output. Investigations for the past two years at the Waita Institute have shown that in the Adelaide district an inch of rain is worth slightly more than 3½ bushels of wheat. The average rainfall for worth signify more than 3% business of wheat. The average rainfall for the growing period of wheat at 20 representative centers in the wheat belt of South Australia is 11½ inches so that 40 bushels per acre is the limit of production imposed by the rainfall.

South Australian wheat-growers, however, are acqually securing less.

South Australian wheat-growers, however, are actually securing less than one-third of this yield. It is, therefore, evident that a material increase in the yield per acre is possible before the limits imposed by the rainfall are approached. The evidence, which is accumulating, seems to suggest that an average of 18 to 20 bushels per acre is within the bounds of possibility. If such an increase can be materialized, the financial stability of the State will be placed on an unassatiable basis, and wheat-growing will be a permanently profitable industry.

Uniform Program Proposed to Put Mississippi on Same Basis as Other Regions

Establishment of a unified, nationwide flood control program to govern not only necessary work on the Mississippi River, but all similar projects in the United States, is the proposal made by Arthur E. Morgan, president of Antioch College in the current Atlantic Monthly.

Immediate repair of broken levees

as a basis for such a thoroughgoing as a basis for such a thoroughgoing flood prevention effort should be the first stene, says Dr. Morgan, who is a recognized engineering authority on Mississippi problems and who began a long acquaintanceship with the river on raft trips in his boy-hood.

Taking issue with the policy favored by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, and which it is understood the Administration will support in the coming session of Congress, Dr. Morgan contends that the Federal Government should not pay the entire costs of prevention projects, but should require the communities beenfited to pay a share and should set uniform requirements such as now govern federal-aid highways.

Pointing out that other sections which have not attracted so much attention as the Mississippi Valley are in equal need of flood protection. Dr. Morgan asserts that a fixed policy giving equal treatment to all will avoid political log-rolling by various states and communities seeking favors in Congress.

He also believes that certain lands along the Mississippi are not at "Chicago has organized a speakers' present worth—as farm areas—the bureau, Birmingham has a class in public speaking, while Fort Worth protecting them and should be used to grow hardwood forests or as Agreeing with the general engineering opinion, Dr. Morgan holds that headwater reservoirs and reforestation would have little effect in controlling floods, but every possibility should be studied, he believes. ### MANUFACTURERS PLEAD LOWER CORPORATE TAX

Flat Rate Policy Reacts to Stockholders' Detriment Is Charge

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn,—Reduction of the federal tax on corporations until it ultimately approximates the mormal tax on individual incomes and adequate control by the Federal Government of the Mississippi River flood waters were favored in resolutions unanimously adopted by the National Association of Manufacturers in closing its thirty-second annual convention here.

The committee on taxation made a report in which the present corporation tax was denounced because of the alleged injustice of its flat rate regardless of income of the shareholders, who, it was pointed out, ultimately paid the tax and because it was declared to result in manifold taxation on many commodities.

James A. Emery, general counsel for the association, discussed the question in detail, after which the resolution was adopted favoring a corporate tax approximating the normal individual tax rate and until this is possible the greatest possible reduction of this tax that this Govern ment's finances will permit.

On flood control, the association adopted resolutions taking the same adopted resolutions taking the same stand as that advocated by John M. Parker, former Governor of Louisiana, at an earlier session, that the Federal Government should assume responsibility for adequate control of the Mississippi floods and that government engineers should have supervision of the work.

The convention also adopted resolutions favoring legislation to permit resale price control by the manufacturer; maintenance in power of the present tariff commission; retention of the present quota plan for immigration restriction rather than a so-called "national origins" method immigration restriction rather than a so-called "national origins" method and legislation permitting voluntary consolidation of railways, subject to approval of the Interstate Commerce

Howard Cheney, South Manchester, Conn., discussing the program pro-posed by the committee on junior education and employment, made the proposal that a program be adopted for combining practical education with employment of children of school age under state supervision. He suggested having state authorities co-operate with employers in progressive training combined with employment to "carry this mass forward with a creative ideal of accomplishment in place of the ideas of idleness which you are instilling today."

STEADY ADVERTISING SEEN AS INVESTMENT

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J .- "Consistent advertising is an investment sec-ond to none," according to C. M. Lemperly of Cleveland, at the annual convention of the National Paint, Oil and Varnish Association

Mr. Lempelly, who is sales man-ager for one of the largest paint firms in the country, declared that not only is advertising essential for the success of any business, but that it must be maintained "because the public soon forgets." Certain manufacturers who thought they would save money by discontinuing or cutting their advertising," he said, "can attest to this."

DARTMOUTH IN THE BIG GAME

Green Meets Yale on Latter's Football Field-Annapolis vs. Pennsylvania

Eastern college football will close its first month of the 1927 season this week-end, and, while there are one or two games scheduled for tomorrow which will have a bearing on claims for the eastern leadership in this great fall sport, the schedule does not offer as many high-class contests or promise as many upsets as last week-end furnished.

The game which has the call this Saturday is the one that brings Dartmouth College against Yale in the latter's hig bowl. Last year the Green was defeated 14 to 7 and the players from Hanover have yet to win their first victory over the Elis at this sport. Last year much confidence prevailed in the Dartmouth camp, and while there is fully as much confidence shown today, it is realized by Coach Jess B. Hawley and his players that Yale is going to put a stronger eleven against them tomorrow than faced them in 1926, and, if they are to defeat the Blue, they must play better football than they have previously shown this year.

Dartmouth was well pleased with its victory over Harvard last Saturday, but realizes that the score of 30 to 6 does not really tell the merits of the two teams. Dartmouth cannot play the same kind of football tomorveloping one of his best elevens at New Haven in this, his last year as head coach, is growing more and more apparent each week. Yale lost to University of Georgia in a game in which the Blue played very poor football, but since then the Elis have grown better and better with each week-end and tomorrow is expected to see them well along toward top form. In Bruce Caldwell '28, Yale has a back who will come pretty close to holding his own with either M. J. Lane '28 or A. E. Marsters '30, the two Dartmouth stars, and the two Eli ends—D. F. Fishwick '28 and S. P. Scott '28—are expected to give the Dartmouth stars more opposition on their sweeping end runs than they received from the Harvard ends. In generalship, Dartmouth, is expected to have a slight edge as Capt. R. B. MacPhail '28 is one of the best quarterbacks in the East this year. Harvard University meets its second Western Conference eleven of the fall tomorrow when Indiana University invades the Stadium. For the first time since the first game of the Harvard University meets its second Western Conference eleven of the fall tomorrow when Indiana University invades the Stadium. For the first time since the first game of the season, Harvard is generally picked to win this game. Coach Arnold Horween '21, has his first squad in shape for tomorrow's game, with the exception of G. E. Donaghy '29, and with the exception of G. E. Donaghy '29, and with the exception of G. E. Donaghy '29, and with the experience galned from the Dartmouth game, the Crimson should be stronger than in any previous game of the season.

Former Chicago Star Coaching

Indiana is being coached by H. O. Page, former University of Chicago football, baseball and basketball star and its record to date is very good. It held University of Notre Dame to a 19-to-6 victory last Saturday and on the previous Saturday held the strong University of Minnesota eleven to a 14-to-14 tie. University of Chicago is the only eleven that has defeated Indiana to date and that was by a store of 13 to 0. The team has really shown up better than Purdue, which defeated Harvard three weeks ago; but to off-set this is the fact that Harvard is much stronger than then.

Princeton is one of the eastern teams that can still claim a victory in each game played and the Orange and Black should have little difficulty in running its list up to five tomorrow with William and Mary College as the opposition. The Southerners have not shown as much strength this year as in some of those past and as Caach W. W. Roper appears to have a strong team at Princeton, the Tigers should have no trouble in keeping their record clean.

W. W. Roper appears to have a strong team at Princeton, the Tigers should have no trouble in keeping their record clean.

The two United States academies are going to have two strenuous games this week-end, although both should come through with victories. West Point after its unexpected defeat at the hands of Yale last Saturday, will not have any "set-up" with Bucknell University as its opponent; but it should win by a narrow margin. Bucknell has won all of its games to date; but with the exception of the 13-to-7 victory over Pennsylvania State College, its showing has not been very impressive.

New York State is going to furnish two games which promise hard football and in one of them a team which has strong claims for the eastern leadership will meet its first real opcosition of the year. This is the New York University-Colgate University zame. Colgate should prove easy for he Violet, although the former has shown fiashes of splendid football, notably in the Columbia game. It has also shown a lack of championship class, notable against Virginia Polytechnic Institute and Wabash College, while New York has been very consistent and has run up 213 points to 19.

CHICAGO—Three members of the Intercollegiate Conference have taken up soccer on a varsity scale and in two instances have scheduled games to be played on the morning of football contests. Ohio State University has taken the lead, being interested in the game for a good many years. The Buckeye booters will face Princeton, Nov. 5, and the University of Illinois team at Columbus, Nov. 19. University of Iowa also is encouraging soccer.

Ohio State had its first organized soccer team back in 1913 when F. R. Castleman, present varsity track mentor, took hold of the Buckeye candidates for a game with Ohio Wesleyan University. Dr. Castleman carried on for several years, being relieved by A. W. Marsh, who came to the northend school from Amherst. Columbus at that time had a trio of downtown teams which the Bucks were obliged to rely on for competition. As a scheduled sport, however, soccer has been in the discard here for a decade.

The present venture of the Scarlet and Gray is under the direction of Leo Staley of the men's physical education department. Staley has over three dozen men reporting every night on the soccer field south of the stadium. Some of the candidates hall from South America and have had extended experience.

American Hockey League Opens Soon

Schedule of Forty Games for Each Club—First Game in Winnipeg Nov. 21

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONTRO
ST. PAUL, Minn.—Play in the American Hockey Association will begin Nov. 21, when the Minneapolis team will journey to Winnipeg for the first contest of the 1927-38 season.
Duluth will see the close of the season, Minneapolis being scheduled there March 22.

Forty games are listed for each team, 20 on home ice and 20 away, Each team, except St. Paul and Minneapolis, will make three trips to other cities in the league, playing a twogame series on two trips and a single match on the third. Because St. Paul and Minneapolis are large single communities with no line of division perceptible to the stranger, the arrangement of games is somewhat different.
They will play on consecutive dates only twice, games in two-game series alternating between the St. Paul Hippodrome and the Minneapolis Arena, Dec. 26 and 27, and Feb. 10 and 11.
Six single matches are divided between the two rinks.

The schedule was announced, following the recent annual meeting of the association which referred it to a committee including J. E. Fitzgerald, St. Paul; Lloyd Turner, Minneapolis, and W. F. Grant, Kansas City. The St. Paul games scheduled at Duluth
Nov. 8 and 19 were postponed to Dec.
1 and 3, Fitzgerald announced, stating that the St. Paul team would not have had sufficient time to complete a playing organization at the earlier

Ice fit for hockey will be ready in Ice fit for hockey will be ready in the Twin Cities Nov. 3, it was announced. Flooding the Minneapolis Arena will begin Nov. 1, the operation taking three days. As the arena is the only rink in the Twin Cities to have artificial ice, both the St. Paul and Minneapolis teams will practice there until cold weather permits the former to use the Hippodrome. "Intercollegiate football, within bounds, is wholly desirable, as it gives a fillp to the sport and something to work for by the undergraduate body. Competent coaching for the teams so that as individuals they know how to play and as teams what plays to attempt under the varying conditions of a hard game is essential.

"It would seem that these things could be secured without paying the coach and his staff of assistants, just as readily as paying them. We are for a complete reversal of practice in this regard, and for a careful consideration of the question whether this cannot be done now, when a new arrangemment to begin next year, is open to us.

"The greatest obstacle to such a course is the public opinion that demands victories, and that considers that the only way to get them is to hire the best coaches and put the responsibility for the season on them. "This, of course, is putting the methods of outside business competition into undergraduate sports. It is asking the university to do what an industrial concern would do if it wants to beat a competitor in its sales. . . . . We do not think this is the way to go about it. ### MORE INTEREST EXPECTED TO BE TAKEN IN MOTORBOATING

Important Changes in Rules at Annual Meeting of Association Should Help Future of Sport

United States is the opinion of those who attended the annual meeting of the American Power Boat Association which took place at the home of the Colonial Yacht Club yesterday. Several rules of importance were changed and all of these changes are expected to play an important part in the future of the sport. Among the most important matters acted on were those regarding restrictions on Gold Cup Race entrants, the muffling of outboard motors and the adoption of the metric system for measuring motors.

The new rule regarding Gold Cup races provides that no Gold Cup boat shall weigh less than 2000 pounds, and imposes heavy penalties on such as might try to beat the rule. The minimum beam of Gold Cup boats was also increased from 5½ to 6 feet.

In response to the proposal to curb the outboard motorists who race with unmuffled motors, the outboard association passed upon the following rules, which were also accepted by the American Power Boat Association.

1. The association is to supervise in behalf of the A. P. B. A. all courses, United States is the opinion of those

Regarding the adoption of the metric system of measurement in classifying racing motors, President Still proposed a series of six different classifications which was adopted. Under the new system the United States will have boats of 1½ liters piston displacement, like some of those which came from abroad to race here this summer; boats of 2½ liters piston displacement, practically identical with the present popular 151-inch displacement class; four liters, 5½ liters, identical with the present "Gold Cup" motors; 8 and 10½ liters. is accomplished by means of the cathode which surrounds the fila-ment heater. Morecroft and Turner have pointed out in the institute of about a radiating wire (the arrange-ment of cathode and heater) offers no impediment whatever to the ex-tension of an electromagnetic field. However, experimental evidence seems to show that a certain amount of electrostatic shielding is effected by such a device.

The Arcturus Tubes The Arcturus A. C. tubes fall in this last group. The filament heater operates from a potential of 15 volts and consumes a current of .35 amperes. Aside from the electrical advantages of this design the voltampere characteristics of the filament are of particular convenience to the enthusiast or service man altering receivers for A. C. operation, due to the fact that the ordinary toy step-down transformer may be used as the heater source of current Special transformers are not re-quired. Also, it is quite practical to operate all heaters in parallel with-out the use of extra heavy leads, stances,

The filament heater of the Arcturus tube is of carbon, operating at a temperature considerably lower than that of the usual carbon in-candescent light, thereby insuring exceptionally long life to the tube. While the tubes on life test as yet show no indication of approaching the end of their usefulness, comparison of the Arcturus filament con-suming 4.5 watts to the candlepower with a filament of the usual carbon lamp consuming 3.5 watts per candle-power would indicate a theoretical life well in excess of 1000 hours. The Arcturus tube also departs from conventional practice in the elimination of any insulated material between the heater and the cathode. It is extremely difficult to eliminate gases from such insulating materia due to the fact that during evacuation they are heated only to moderate temperatures by conduction and ra-

Adaptation of Receivers

As is implied by the parallelity of filaments and the use of standard sockets, the adaptation of receivers to A. C. operation employing the Arcturus tubes, is greatly facilitated, while the alteration of different circuits necessarily holds problems of varying nature and degree of com-plexity, a consistent application of intelligent generalities should in-sure a success in practically all in-

Many receivers require only one or two alterations to adapt them to op-eration with these tubes. The ac-companying diagram indicates the List's method of alteration. Sketch A of rigure 1 shows a conventional five-ube tuned R. F. receiver, stabilized and volume-controlled by returning Gange, the distinguished British the R. F. grids through a potentiometer. Sketch B shows this circuit worked over for A. C. operation with Arcturus four-prong tubes.

While the diagram speaks for it-self, it is desirable to stress the salient points associated with the change. All grounds must be elimi-nated from the filament circuit. The filaments are wired in parallel. While it is desirable though not essential that the filament wiring be twisted or laced, the wires must be close to-gether. All grid returns excepting from the power tube are grounded and the necessary blases (excepting detector) secured by connecting the bias potential to ground and the remaining side of the battery to the plus filament post or posts on the tube or tubes to be biased.

Grid Bias Details A positive bias of 4.5 to 9 volts is applied to the grid of the detector tube through a five-megohm leak. (The negative post of the battery running to the cathode or plus fila-ment post on the socket.) A grid condenser is used, in the conven-tional manner, detection still being effected by grid current rectification.

The power tube is blased in the usual way—22.5 volts is applied to the grid with a plate voltage of 180. It is impracticable to use a rheostat with A. C. tubes. Also any vol-ume control, such as a potentiometer,

Where Young Workers Find Home Which They Need, Study Which They Want, and Play-A Boys' Hotel

Boys' Hotel Helps Put Reformatory Out of Business

Kansas City, Mo. Special Correspondence CCORDING to E. E. Porterfield judge of the Juvenile Court, Kansas City owes much of its aparative freedom from the customary delinquent boy problem to the functioning, through more than 20 years, of the Boys' Hotel. This is 20 years, of the Boys Hotel. This is neither an orphans' home nor a charity work in the usual sense. It is a hotel for self-supporting working boys between the ages of 14 and 18 years. The boys themselves pay fully half of the average net operating cost. Public-spirited citizens contribute the balance and regard their gifts one of the best investments that Kansas City has to offer vestments that Kansas City has to offer.

Charles B. Hahn, known from coast to coast as an expert in "boyology," has been for many years at the head of this splendid work. "We have demonstrated beyond question," he states, "that it costs less to save a boy from going wrong than it does to make the attempt to reform him once he may have fallen into unfortunate ways. The Boonville reformatory in this State is operated at an average cost of $400 per boy per year. The Boys' Hotel is operated at an annual cost per boy of $120, or less. These figures, quite irrespective of very many other considerations, offer unanswerable argument."

argument."

The work of the Juvenile Improvement Club, as the organized work is known legally, divides itself into three parts: the hotel for homeless working boys, the boys' club, and the all-year camp for younger boys. The hotel and club occupy well appointed and substantial buildings in the northeast part of the city. The pointed and substantial buildings in the northeast part of the city. The all-year camp comprises a 68-acre tract of forest and open fields some 15 miles south. The valuation of these real estate holdings approximates $250,000. The boys who live at the hotel and camp are mostly boys from families that have been broken up. They are boys, as Mr. Hahn states, who, "without rudder to guide and sail to carry them forward," would probably drift into bad company and become eventually a menace to society.

Something Had to Be Done

The idea of a hotel for working boys was born out of circumstances created by a real emergency. Twenty years ago the number of homeless boys who came under the wing of the juvenile court reached such proportions as to constitute a serious problem. They were not particuarly bad boys or delinquent boys—simply volungsters without homes, already

Attendance upon Sunday morning service in the hotel parlors is obligatory. These meetings are conducted by the boys themselves. The spiritual side of life is emphasized in many ways. The boys, for instance, are led to think of prayer as a natural thing. It is emphasized in many ways. The boys, for instance, are led to think of prayer as a natural thing. It is not unusual, according to Mr. Hahn, to see boys kneeling in their rooms in prayer while their doors atand wide open. Rules are few in this hotel. Boys ahy at 'don'ts,' asserts Mr. Hahn. "We find it always better to put everything before them from the affirmative point. Someone, recently, put up a sign in the wash rooms: 'Don't leave water standing in the bowls.' It didn't work. But,so soon as we changed the cards to those that said. Others besides yourcelt calgoy a clean bowl,' we had no further difficulty." Boys who live at the hotel range in age from 14 to 18. Derived from the French, "bougette," which is the diminutive of "bouge," meaning a leather bag or wallet, the word was used at first with this primary significance. This sense of the term is found in the phrase from Scott's "Marmion," "Staff, budget, bottle, scrip, he wore."

Budget gradually transferred its meaning of container to that of the contents of a bag, wallet, or bundle.

Frequently it was used figuratively as the title of a journal, as Pall Mall Budget and Young Folks

The modern significance of "budget" as an estimate of public revenue and expenditure probably owes this meaning to a pamphlet which was sarcastically entitled, "The Budget Opened" in which Rob-ert Walpole, then Chancellor of the reading. A widening discovery that such literature is as entertaining as fiction, and has many of the same characteristics, may have contributed to the vogue. The 'public' that then read biography in preference to fiction, like the "public" that read in both divisions, has no doubt numerically increased. Whatever the reasons, it is now to the profit of publishers to bring out biographies. If may be admitted that some of these publications are less important than sons, it is now to the from to have lishers to bring out biographies. It may be admitted that some of these publications are less important than others, and that the "public" for the biography of a pugilist is probably not identical with the "public" for the biography of a statesman.

An addition of real importance is the biography of Horacs Porter, under the title, "An American Soldier and Diplomat," written by his daughter, Elsie Porter Mende, in collaboration with Henry Greenicaf Pearson. The collaboration, to which Mrs. Mende brought her long intimacy with her father's career, and Professor Pearson his ability as a historian of the public events with which Horace Porter had been associated, has been excellently conducted; the result is a well-balanced, constantly interesting and authoritative book. One glimpses its inception, and something of the author, in a few paragraphs of the introduction: "On a shelf in one of the deep cupboards were packages of other letters, which I opened one by one. At the end of four carefully written pages I read the signature of Joseph Choate. The big sprawling autograph attached to the letters of William McKinley Bose' Tweed," the Story of a Grim Generation, by Denis Tilden Lynch. New York: Boni e Liveright. 4.

TRUTH becomes stranger and seven more fascinating than fiction in Mr. Lynch's colorful sade for reform, the prosecution of the malefactors, and the mighty fernando Wood to the Mayoralty in 1855, and continuing through three succeeding decades. Fernando had the "face of an Apollo," but was corrupt and mercenary; his allies were thugs and the underworld; his goal the Governorship and the Presidency, "To understand Tweed one must know Wood," declares the author, who states that the city was ruled by corruptionists for 30 years before the lownfall of the famous Ring.

This work, which shows exhaustive research, is not confined to Tweed, who frequently disappears in the narrative. The scheming Wood, Jake Sharp, the "Boodle Aldermen," Madame Restell, Morrissey, Rynders, Stewart, Drew, Vanderbilt, Flak, Gould, Train, Beecher, Tilton, the Claffin sistere, Greeley, Lincoln, Seymour, Tilden and others alternately hold the stage amid scenes of the Cityli War, and the riots, fouds and panics of the period.

Tweed remains the central figure; his portrait is boldly drawn at full length on a wide canvas, and painted in vivid colors. No history, therefore, he goes not for the sake of any academic interest; history is not for him the tale of old forgotten things; it is rather the "monitor of the future"; is there any guidance to be gained from the study of the way in which others have dealt with the same problem? History for him is not "bunk." It gives to those who have ears to hear their needed guidance. Over certain roads it sets warning pillars, as Christian and Faithful did in "Pilgrim"s Progress," and over others it writes, "This is the way; walk ye in it."

Certainly, if Professor Macmillan

Certainly, if Professor Macmillan proves his thesis, he should be heeded not only by African statesmen, but by all who have to deal with the clash-of color. And even if he is not considered to have proved it, he will considered to have proved it, he will be worth reading.

The Hottentets

His thesis, developed with great learning, is simply this: Africa in 1927 is face to face with the need to define its policy toward the Bantu; a hundred years ago Cape Colony, then a much smaller society, had to define the 'reistions' between the whites and the Hottentots. After a long and disastrous struggle a certain policy was adopted. It so far succeeded that in the present day the descendants of those Hottentots are a civilized people with the privilege of a civilized people. It is worth while considering whether or not that policy, vindicated by experience, might not be in essence the one that policy, vindicated by experience, might not be in essence the one needed now. What was right in 1828 in dealing with Hottentots may be right in 1928 in dealing with Bantu. Broadly speaking, the policy which prevailed was that which is associated with the name of Dr. John Philip. He was the "Wilberforce of South Africa"; from 1819-1851 he was agent of the London Missionary Society; and from the time he completed his study of the problem he stood bravely in the face of much

The Prince of Wales's speeches have got "the hands" in so many quarters of the globe and from such a variety of audiences that the present volume, which puts a characteristic selection of them pleasantly together, should serve a purpose quite its own in helping to show the nature of the art of which they are so conspicuous a presentashow the nature of the art of which they are so conspicuous a presentation. This srt may perhaps rely chiefly upon interpreting simply and modestly the thought that is uppermost with those who constitute each audience addressed. It is an art nevertheless that so few have mastered with anything like corresponding success that the words used—even when torn from the context of audience and scene which gave them appropriateness when delivered—are well worth studying for themselves.

MEMBERS of the Book-of-the-Month Club's Selecting Committee are now considering their choice of the most outstanding and readable book. We do not know what the book will be. If you are bookishly inclined, however, you are overwhelmed and confused by the hundreds of books continuously thrust upon your attention. You are pulled this way by some favorable review, and that way by some clever advertisement. Often there are a score of books you have been excited into thinking you want—at the same time! Unfortunately, you can't read them all. It is not your business but your pleasure to read books, and your reading time is limited. Your attitude may be summed up in this statement: you are particularly anxious not to miss those books which, in the general opinion, are "worth reading." But what are they?

The plan of the Club is simplicity itself. The publishers send copies of their new books far in advance of publication to the selecting committee, which consists of Henry Seidel Canby, chairman; Heywood Broun, Dorothy Canfield, Chistopher Morley and William Allen White. Out of the scores of books submitted every month, this committee selects those which it considers butstanding, for one reason or another. All of the month's finest books are listed. And the book which rates the highest, in the opinion of the committee, is given the additional honor of being called the "book-of-the-month," and is sent to those subscribers who indicate that they want it.

Before this book is sent out, how-ever, a carefully written description of it, and of all the books recomded in the month, is sent to

First Civilized American", which the press acclaimed as "one of the greatest biographies of our time" the author has chosen as his new subject a famous figure entirely opposite in tempera-ment to the philosopher and sage.

This new biography contains surprising material of a romantic nature and corrects many errors into which previous biographers have fallen. Naval and diplomatic archives in America, France, and Russia furnished the new material on which this swift narrative is based.

It deals particularly with the influence of celebrated men and women of Europe and America on John Paul Jones' career and reveals a phase of his life which has hitherto been obscure. Written with all the flavor and charm of the Franklin biography, with even more intimate revelations of a truly great American character, it is far more fascinating than any fiction. Illustrated with reproductions from lineleum engrapings by Leon Underwood.

MRS. HARRY A. BURNHAM Chairman, Division of Home-Making Department of the American Home, General Federation of Women's Clubs

T WAS a delightful experience to attend the thirty-second annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Women's Clubs, Oct. 10-14. The theme for the entire convention program was "Beautyand its Application to Daily Life."

Mrs. John B. Hamme, the state president, said, in her call for the convention, that it was a theme which was self-explanatory, and would unfold its mental, physical and spiritual meaning as the convention progressed. This promise was fulfilled splendidly, for the entire program, including the necessary reports and business matters, carried out the theme in a very lovely manner. It was a convention of unusual interest with several unique features, such as a visit to the twenty-aixth International Art Exhibition at Carnegle Institute. Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of the Carnegle Art Gallery, spoke on "The Artists of the International Art Exhibition of 1927." Mr. Saint-Gaudens gave an interesting résumé of the pictures included in the exhibition, the artists, the countries where they live, and something of the modernist school to which most of the prize winners belong. Following the lecture the delegates were conducted through the galleries by guides who pointed out the pictures mentioned and supplemented the information already gained.

Mrs. Thomas G. Winter gave the address one evening, her subject being, "Evaluating Our Club Work." Mrs. Winter expressed in her own lovely way, the belief that the many club women all doing their level best in their own communities, make up a tremendous spiritual force for good in the country and world at large.

Odd Pieces

The so-called "assembling" of odd bits of china and glassware standing unused on the pantry shelves often brings unexpected and satisfactory results. It is worth while to get these odds and ends out and try different arrangements according to one's particular needs for separate serving dishes. By looking at the single pieces of tableware displayed in the shops, it is easy to see how salad dishes, sandwich plates, cracker, and cheese plates, as well as novel table decorations can be built up from unrelated pieces stored in the family china closet.

The salad combination dish is the easiest to arrange as in its simplest form it needs but a generous sized plate and a suitable center container for salad dressing. The center receptacle, whether a sherbet glass or a china bouillon cup, according to the plate used, can be held in place with white-of-egg or a few drops of china cement. The saled should be arranged for easy serving, preferably in individual portions, as molds of jellied vegetables or stuffed tomstoes set in a border of lettuce. Where a platter is used, assorted cold meat, jellied fish, attiffed eggs or other substantial food can be arranged within a border of lettuce or celery tips and a larger container in the center hold dressed potato salad, property of activity.

I am sure that this program has interested you so much that you will want the suggestions which Mrs. Philips has given for projects, but there will not be room to include them in the column this week and so I will give them to you next week.

Imitation Candles

I MITATION candles that will not soften and lose their shape and freshness are always desirable. A lovely kind that will be a joy to possess can be made at home by even a novice.

The height of the candles will depend on the size of the candlesticks. Possibly they may measure 12 to 15 inches high. Many of the newest candles are very slender and taper gradually all the way up.

Shaping the Candle

Take a piece of white or cream-colored paper considerably stiffer than ordinary writing paper. The rather stiff paper having a calendar attached and usually bearing a picture of some kind if often just right for the purpose, provided the back of it is light-colored. Cut a strip of the length desired for the candle, and about six inches wide. Roll it into the exact size and shape desired, trying it in the candlestick, for it is important that it should fit snugly in the socket so that jarring will not into the exact size and shape desired, trying it in the candlestick, for it is important that it should fit snugly in the socket so that jarring will not cause it to fall out later. Glue down the outer edge of the paper and bind it with twine to hold it until it dries.

The tip end of the candle must also be arranged at this time. Cut away part of the paper underneath, and crush in the outer layer of paper to produce a sharp point, simulating the tiny projection of a wick. Glue his part in place. If necessary glue a bit of tissue paper over the point. Do not attempt to make it smooth; it will be more effective if it is not.

Decoration

When the glue is dry, the candles are ready to be decorated. Although the edge of the paper will not show much, let it come behind. In front, in the upper third of the candle, sketch in with pencil two roses, and a little more in diameter. How a Diver Saved a Cathedral

The marvellous endurance of divers in going to great depths has been touched on in previous chapters, but perhaps the strangest task ever given to a diver was that of saving a cathedral. Some years ago, Winchester Cathedral was in such grave danger of collapsing that it became necessary to underpin the walls and strengthen the foundations. The whole cathedral stood upon a water-logged peat bog, the ancient builders upon reaching water having laid logs of beech to take their foundations. The modern architect, Mr. T. G. Jackson, and his engineer-ing collaborator, Mr. Francis Fox, knew that to pump the water out would be practically to pump the cathedral to destruction, for the drift of the water was bound to carry the

Shortly after the formation of the premier Grand Lodge Dr. James Anderson prepared, and early in 1723 published, the first Edition of the Book of Constitutions. In "The Charges of a Free-Mason" it is stated that "a Mason is obliged by his Tenure, to obey the moral Law."

Every man was further charged to be a "peaceable Subject to the Civil Powers," and to be loyal to the State. The duty of the Brethren to relieve the wants of others was stressed and qualities such as courteousness, charitableness, kindness, and temperance were enjoined, but particularly "Brotherly-Love, the Foundation and Cap-stone, the Cement and Glory of this ancient Fraternity." the Cement and Glory of this ancient

This message was again repeated when another Masonic Mission was sent to South America in 1927.

Upon this outlook of Masonry, Sir Altred Robbins, who undertook both Missions, when in U. S. A., summed the whole matter up when he said:
"I believe every movement we make in Masonry toward a better understanding between man and man, between peoples and peoples, assists our instinctive revolt against the continuance of wars."

The Freemason is taught the duty of service to others, and therein his duty as a citizen. It is no part of Grand Lodge actively to participate in, or recommend Brethren to take up, Civic work. The principles and tenets of the Order, if carefully taught, should, however, create the desire to help as far as possible both Town and State.

Some Specialties Undergo Sharp Losses-Entire Market Weak

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (P)-Selling pressure, which had been intermittent in the stock market since the long decline last week was checked, was re-day.

Encouraged by success in creating an air of uneasiness in speculative circles by their ability to pound down important stocks, bears forged around and managed to uncover other spots where effective support also was lacking.

where effective support also was lacking.

With a good deal of gloomy gossip regarding the status of current and prospective earnings, and sharp depreciation in September operating income of important railroad systems, bullish operators found it difficult to hold a following even when they had managed to start prices moving upward at the outset.

Early advances of 1 to 3 points, inspired in large part by the big reduction in brokers' loans, were transformed into losses of as much, or more, when the selling wave swept the market.

Confidence in the soundness of fundamental conditions was reflected in market.

Confidence in the soundness of fundamental conditions was reflected in the heavy accumulation of particular stocks, which ordinarily move widely, but efforts to realize in some issues at the higher prices disclosed a rather thin market. This was illustrated by the precipitate fall of 20 points in Rossia Insurance after attaining a new peak figure.

Chesspeake & Ohio and Reading, with losses of 3 and 4 points respectively, were outstanding weak spots in the railroad section.

Some of the week's lowest prices were reached here and there, notably in U. S. Steel, General Electric and General Railway Signal.

Warren Brothers was an outstanding exception, moving up 11½ points to a new maximum.

The closing was weak. American Express was pushed up nearly 10 points in the face of a rapid declining movement elsewhere. Du Pont slumped more than 11 points, Colorado Fuel 7½, and Case Thresbing Machine. Abraham & Straus, Wabash, Pittsburgh & West Virginia, Houston Oil, and Jersey Central between 6 and 7. The downward movement was intenand Jersey Central between 6 and 7.

and Jersey Central between 6 and 7. The downward movement was intensified by the closing out of many speculative accounts. Total sales approximated 2,000,000 shares.

Foreign exchange opened steady, demand sterling ruling around 4.86 11-16, and French francs above 3.92 cents. Spanish pesetas were off about 3 points at the start

Spanish pesetas were off about 3 points at the start.

Firm prices prevailed in the bond market today, coincident with a falling off in the volume of new issues. Money conditions remained easy, and offerings in the listed market were comparatively small.

Railway liems continued to receive buyers' favor, particularly Frisco 4s, which were accumulated in rather large amounts at the high level of the year, and Great Northern 4½s, which reached a new peak. Chesapeak 5s and Rock Island 4s were in fair supply.

Shell Union Oil 5s continued to work slowly downward in further reflection of new financing by a subsidiary. Public utility liens were quiet, aside from a slight improvement among the tele-

a sight improvement among the tele-phone issues.

Firmness ruled the Federal Govern-ment group, although the amount of business was not large. Treasury bonds were especially well supported. German obligations again inclined to heaviness, but firmness was appar-ent in most other sections of the for-eign list.

"Now, if a device can see through 100 feet of fog sufficiently well to make a landing, the chances are that it could see enough at 200 or 300 feet to recognize a well-lighted airdrome or to find a great city like Paris under average conditions. In other words, to refer again to Byrd's experience, it is probable that if he had had such a device as I am fostering, he would have been able to locate Le Bourget Airdrome and made a safe landing. It seems to have been his op nion, and that of others, that he flew over Paris, but couldn't find his way, and it is naturally much safer to run into the sea at a speed of 60 miles an hour and at a nangle of one in eight, thun to run into the land under the same conditions, particularly when you don't know whether or not there are obstructions on the ground.

American Bosch Magneto reports for the third quarter net profits after depreciation, but hefore federal taxes, of $114,848, equivalent to 55 cents a share on 207,399 no-par shares. This compares with a profit for the third quarter of 1926 of $351 in that quarter there were extraordinar expenses in connection with the sale of the Gray & Davis business to Elect ic Auto-Lite Company.

N INTERESTING discussion of a hot piece of iron, placed at the

An invention which would plerce through fog for at least 100 feet is given in a letter to this department from Godfrey L. Cabot. president of the National Aeronautic Association of the United States of America. Mr. Cabot is so convinced of the possibilities of working out such an idea that he has offered a prize of $10,000 for its development. His letter, in part, follows:

"Commander Richard E. Byrd's experience in his transatiantle fight is a good illustration of the danger to which the aviator is, in general, exposed when he is obliged to descend and cannot see the land or water beneath him.

"The speed at which an aviator gildes down, in general, varies between 60 and 100 miles an hour. When he comes near the surface to which he is descending. he flattens out and flies parallel to the surface and as close as he possibly can to it, until he loses flying speed, which usually meahs from 35 to 75 miles an hour. according to the type of his machine. In ordinary commercial practice it is usually between 40 and 55 miles an hour.

"Probably, when Commander Byrd gilded down to the water, he was going in the neighborhood of 69 miles an hour. If he could have seen the water at a distance of 10 feet. he could have seen the did not see it until he was right close to 'it and probably struck it at an angle of one in eight and a speed of about 60 miles an hour and wrecked his plane.

"Now, if a device can see through 100 feet of fog sufficiently well to motions of the bones when we move in the focus of the hand and see the indirect way, these invisible rays might be made visible. We can see the skeleton of the hand and see the motions of the bones when we move in the focus of the hand and see the motions of the bones when we move in the focus of the hand and see the motions of the bones when we move in the focus of the hand and see the motions of the bones when we move in the focus of the horse code, any body familiar with the Morse code, any body familiar with the Morse code, any body familiar with the Morse code, any bod knowledge of light.

"We live in a medium which we call the ether, which cannot be seen or felt or weighed, and which we will be. I have no doubt, sooner or only know by reason of the ways or oscillations of which it is capable, and which vary in length all the wise to search for the solution.

and which vary in length all the way from 20 or 30 miles or more, as in the Hertzian oscillations or wireless felegraphy, familiarly known as radio and the oscillations of letthan a millionth of an inch, such as those of the X-Ray or Röntgen Ray. Intermediate in length, between the roomously long vibrations of radio and the inconceivably short radiations of the X-Ray come the rays of the X-Ray come the rays of of the X-Ray, come the rays of probable that oscillations will be visible light, which vary in length between 1-33,400 and 1-65,000 of an than the intra-red rays now known inch, the former being at the red to us, and yet much shorter than the end of the spectrum and the latter shortest Hertzian waves that we use or heat rays which carry a great amount of radiant heat, but no light visible to the eye.

"I have seen a bit of sulphur ignited at a distance of something like 100 feet by the heat radiated from "It will be reasonable to begin by studying rays we already know, try-objects, as are infra-red rays, and have the power of penetrating finely divided water, for a fog holds liquid water in fine drops. In other words, we want some ray that is not reflected by water surface, but is reflected by solid objects, before we may expect to solve the problem of descending safely to the land.

"Of course, another honeful the successful in solving this difficult and important industrial problem than man with all his wisdom, to which he replied: "That is simple: they have been at it longer."

"Let us hope that the problem of seeing through a fog will receive at least a partial solution in a much more simple. The problem of seeing through a fog will receive at least a partial solution in a much more simple. The problem of the p investigation is, to what extent can an airdrome be illuminated with light that will penetrate fog. The ordinary commercial red light is simply a white light from which yellow, blue, green and other colors have been partially sifted out and the red tha we see is a residuum of the white light and the average wavelength of this residuum is the wavelength of the red color that we see. "Some years ano when I was study tory of Mr. Pevear, the color experi who had charge of the wonder-ful color effects produced in June. 1917, in the pageant that took place when the Massachusetts Instishowed me three yellow lights, in-distinguishable to the naked eye, and he then showed me these three lights through a spectroscope. One of them was a monochromatic yellow, pro-duced I think by the flame of common salt; one contained nothing but monochromatic green; the third was minus violet, that is, it contained every color in the rainbow to a greater or less degree excepting vio-

"The point of all this is that the problem must be understood in order to be olved, or, at least, that the more the investigator knows of what he is trying to do, the better chance that he will be able to do it.

"Now suppose that we could find some ray that could be generated in large quantity, of nearly mono-chromatic light, so that you would, for instance, get a larger total quanfor instance, get a larger total quan-tity of the desired red than there is in sunlight. Then, you might obtain a result far more potent than any device which operates simply by excluding from sunlight or from electric light, as the case might be, those rays which are not desired for the purpose you have in ming.

"It is, for instance, would be to get a very vivid mano incomatic yold a

Day and Night Service for Depositors

In a few days, the branch of the Atlantic National Bank at 238 Huntington Ave. will be equipped to give 24-hour service to depositors-the only bank in Boston to offer this additional convenience to its customers.

This new system which permits deposits to be made at any hour and while the bank is closed is already in use in other large cities. The installation is being made by the Mosler Safe Company.

Our Huntington Avenue branch will give you full details of this new 24-hour deposit service.

greater quantity of this color than could be obtained by filtering out this color from a very brilliant electric light.

4 4 . 4 "If this succeeds, you might find yourself one step nearer the solution of the problem by the ability to produce light in an airdrome that could be seen at greater distance through a fog than any light now so used. The next step then naturally would be to see if any such light could be made of such intensity that it could advance the problem of making the surface of an airdrome visible through a fog to a pilot attempt ing to come down.

"The firefly and other phosphor the problem of a maximum of light with a minimum of energy. Their light is far more brilliant just between the green and yellow than in other parts of the spectrum, and this is the part of the spectrum which is most visible.

"Lord Kelvin was once asked how it happened that these insects, that studying rays we already know, trying various experiments to see if any of them are reflected by material

Along Friendly Border Lines

Albert Johnson, chairman of the House Immigration and Naturalization Committee, confirm the announcement recently made by James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor of the United States, that the alien smuggling situation is one of the most serious problems in the country today. It appears that with the passage of successive quota laws the incentive to alien smuggling across the borders and by way of Cuba has increased, with correspondingly higher prices being charged by those who conduct this illegal traffic. In pursuance of the efforts of Secretary Davis and his department to enforce the law, increasingly large appropriations are required to provide an effective border patrol.

In this increasing disregard for the law, or perhaps more properly in the increasing prevalence of the belief that the law can be violated with impunity, there is seen a striking analogy with the experience of federal prosecutors and courts in their efforts to enforce the law against the traffic in alcoholic beverages in the United States. It is a matter of almost common knowledge that the prohibition law was much more generally enforced during the two years immediately following its enactment than during the succeeding two or three years. Likewise in the case of violations of the quota law it appears that those who have undertaken to carry on what amounts to a system of borderjumping or alien "bootlegging" have so organized and systematized their methods as to render detection impossible in many cases. All of which goes to prove, at least circumstantially, the oft-repeated assertion that any law of conduct imposed by humanity upon itself can be broken, although it cannot, merely by violating it, be successfully or effectively nullified.

Statistics have been prepared showing that approximately 170,000 aliens who are still at large and unregistered in the United States, entered the country illegally during the last year. In addition to these, it appears that 19,000 aliens were captured along the Canadian and Mexican borders and in Florida during the same period and imprisoned or deported summarily. Yet in face of this unpleasant showing it is observed that no organized effort is being made by citizens of the United States to amend or repeal the law. It is not claimed by any of the so-called champions of personal liberty that this law should be nullified simply because it has been found possible to violate its pro-

The right and sensible view is taken that a way will be found, despite serious difficulties, to compel reasonably strict obedience and observance of the law. Unsympathetic influences outside the United States, abetted and encouraged by unpatriotic sentiment within the country, have sought to make it appear that the American people cannot determine their own economic, social and political standards, or that once having agreed upon them, they are powerless to enforce them against the opposition of those who do not accept or entirely approve American standards.

America's door of opportunity is not closed against those who in good faith seek the opportunities which are provided. But it is closed, more than theoretically, to those who premeditatedly violate the country's laws. The mills sometimes seem to grind slowly, but in the end that which it is sought to accomplish will be realized.

On to the Educational Green

OLLEGE teaching must always mean good essence of the inaugural address of Ernest Hatch Wilkins at Oberlin College last Monday, ecomes at once a clarifying element in a heavy fog bank of agitated though uninspired generalizations as to the reasons for college. In a hard-blowing weather of educational growth and seeming confusion, Dr. Wilkins has stepped out onto his new course and driven the much belabored ball straight from tee to green. It was done with such ease and so naturally that from every side-college presidents, professors, students, parents—one can almost hear the approving, "Yes, to be sure, that's it." College exists in order that the people may have good teaching. This, in Dr. Wilkins's opinion, is its concrete purpose.

It is perhaps but a new emphasis upon a fundamental thing. Yet, in the midst of a world-wide increase in college enrollment, in the face of a nation-wide stir over the merits of the junior college, also while most professors are trying to decide how much they should give to research, when parents are required to spend bigger and bigger sums for their children's college expenses, and when universities are offering courses to cover every possible interest, to say nothing of the countless extracurricular affairs of college life, it is opportune to be helped to see the whole business in the light of a simple, major, unmixed purpose. He who is in earnest about developing his abilities and his understanding to the end that he may best serve his fellow men, wants the best teaching. He goes to college to find it.

Dr. Wilkins's words may well be expected to have a wholesome influence. College administrators may be led to give more thought to the quality of their own teaching staffs. Professors and their assistants will doubtless be encouraged by the thought that a more just regard has been given to their place in the function of the college. This in turn would lead them to look more closely to their individual qualifications. Students who hear or read Dr. Wilkins' address are likely to look more sharply for good teaching. For he describes the good teacher.

The president of Oberlin does not concern himself with the old-time notion that a teacher is an instructor, a mere trafficker in bundles of knowledge. Instead, we are presented with the teacher who is a guide to his students—a helper in their individual unfoldment, a searcher side by side with his students for that which is worth knowing, for that which has permanent value. As defined by Bernard Shaw: "I am not a teacher; only a fellow-traveler of whom you asked the way. I pointed ahead—ahead of myself as well as you." And as a prominent educator has said: "As teachers we must make ourselves progressively unnecessary."

Neither does Dr. Wilkins fail to stress the essential need of adequate teaching facilities and adequate salaries. "Only in an adequate environment can a teacher teach his best."

And, "Only on the basis of an adequate salary can a teacher teach his best." He concludes, "If the college so selects its teachers and so supports their teaching, and if the teachers so respond to this support, what heights of educational achievement may not be attained?"

Municipal Credit for Urban Transit

THE problem of providing for the transportation of the millions living or doing business in the great city of New York has occupied the attention of municipal officials and state legislators for more than half a century, and seems as far from a satisfactory solution as it was a generation ago. Substantial progress has been made with the construction of subway systems, but the steadily increasing population has more than kept pace with each additional transportation service.

Recognizing the essential fact that halfway measures are of little use in dealing with the enormous volume of urban travel, the Transit Commission has submitted plans for such additions to existing services as will provide for all present needs and permit of gradual extensions as the future may require. To furnish the necessary capital for the proposed new undertak-ings it will be necessary for the city to borrow in excess of the constitutional provision relating to indebtedness, and the State Legislature has submitted an amendment to the Constitution providing that the proposed $300,000,000 debt extension be exempted from the limitation on city borrowing. This amendment will be voted upon at the coming election, and its advocates and opponents are busily engaged in presenting to the public their respective views concerning the advisability of its adoption.

Against the amendment it is urged that the addition to the city's borrowing power may be used to bring about the recapture of existing subways, built with municipal funds or credit, and that a conflict with the private companies operating those systems would result in protracted litigation that would long delay the development of the promised unified system. It is unfortunate that the contracts under which these lines were constructed were so drawn as to leave loopholes for legal disputes, but the Transit Commission is confident that the rights and interests of the city will be upheld by the

In appealing for popular support for the amendment, the Transit Commission is able to point to a record of past accomplishment as a justification for its plans for the future. Without the city's aid there would probably have been no subways, as private capital refused to undertake the necessary development of underground transit. Municipal construction may not be the final word in the transit situation, but it is assuredly better than no construction.

Tantallon Castle in Twilight

OTHING, it may be safe to say, leaves so vivid an impression upon those who travel along the coast of the Firth of Forth as the ruins of Tantallon Castle in the twilight. The grim beauty of the dark walls against the evening sky is enhanced by the roar of the waves that beat upon the neighboring rocks. Like an etching the picture remains in the memory, and no one who has seen it would do other than hope that it might continue to enrich the historic associations of later generations. It is for that reason that many welcome the steps which are being taken by the Ancient Monuments Department for its preservation.

The history of the castle is hidden in the mists of obscurity. For generations it was the stronghold of the house of Douglas, and, as Scott says, was one of the "extreme bulwarks of a power which extended from sea to sea," and "threatened to place their owners on the throne of Scotland." As it now stands, and has stood for centuries, on the mainland opposite the Bass Rock—an island which has much of historic value in its relics of prison days, and which seems to be inhabited by little other than sea fowl that hover above the cliffs—the castle is chiefly an object of interest to visitors. Romance after romance has been woven round the castle. Scott refers to it in his well-known poem. "Marmion":

But scant three miles the band had rode, When o'er a height they passed, And sudden, close before them showed His towers Tantallon vast.

For their beauty and historic significance the ruins have claim to special consideration, and it is encouraging to learn that the work of preservation has been undertaken. In the past not a few priceless monuments have been allowed to fall into decay, but the Tantallon project serves to remind the public of what is being done in this direction, quietly yet effectively, by a branch of the British Government about which little is heard.

Great Britain's Peace Crusade

THE people of Great Britain have been greatly stirred by the six months' peace crusade undertaken by the churches of that country. The challenge of world peace has been lifted high before the people of England, Scotland and Wales, with remarkable results. Everywhere the church was called upon for leadership in the crusade to abolish war.

The name of the Rev. F. W. Norwood, minister of the City Temple, London, will long be associated with this peace education movement. Dr. Norwood, on his own testimony, spoke in more than 250 peace meetings over a period of six months. His itinerary took him into every nook and corner of the island empire. His hearers numbered more than 200,000. In Glasgow the crowd is reported to have overtaxed the capacity of St. Andrew's Hall. In Wales only a few buildings were found to be large enough to accommodate the throngs who waited upon Dr.

Norwood's words. Among his hearers were Liberals and Conservatives, ecclesiastics of all communions, lords and laborers, Socialists, generals, admirals and extreme pacifists.

What of the interest of these aroused multitudes with regard to the question of peace and war? "In the main," said Dr. Norwood at the conclusion of the campaign, "they were confused folk, united on one thing only, their detestation of war and their utter disillusionment concerning its alleged benefits. So far as their intellects and their moral sense were concerned, they were 'through' with it."

This British peace mission was not confined to church adherents. Public buildings and town halls were placed at Dr. Norwood's disposal. In many instances the Mayor or Lord Mayor would occupy the chair. Representatives of civil, military, political and educational associations were to be found on the speakers' platform.

The success of this campaign, and of similar efforts in other countries, clearly discloses the fact that organized warfare is on the defensive. It is no longer believed that men are mere fighting animals. Humanity is rapidly emancipating itself from the implications of such a crude philosophy. The way out of this war wilderness may not be entirely clear. Dr. Norwood, in referring to the many thousands who listened to his peace message, said: "They would get rid of it [war] if they could, but its thongs and rivets seemed inextricable." Notwithstanding this observation, it remains true that the way out is being found. The thongs are being broken and the rivets are being loosened. When the last chapter in the crusade for a warless world shall have been written, it will be discovered that the people themselves, by their refusal to be-lieve in the inevitability of conflict and discord, and by their persistent devotion to the cause of peace, were in very truth the determining factors in the attainment of international concord.

Academic Farms Prosper

AN EXPERIMENT is being worked out in Illinois in agricultural education with some striking and surprising results. Schoolboy farmers in vocational agricultural classes in the high schools of that State are required to raise grain on a small plot of ground or bring an animal to maturity as practical demonstrations and as training in the theories taught them, before they can receive credit for the work. They are also allowed any profit that may come from the sale of their products. Last year the young farm students in these practice classes earned more than $250,000 from their own self-education efforts! That sounds like returns on a large, already established and successful business.

Of the 2648 boys enrolled in this work last year 1320 raised animals, 1115 produced crops of grain and 213 went into nonmoney-making ventures. The exact total of the earnings was $250,082.70. Standard farm projects, including raising of alfalfa, barley, corn, garden produce, oats, potatoes, soy beans, sweet clover, rye, wheat and orchard fruits, netted $113,509.19, an average of $101.81 for the 1115 agricultural learners in those branches of the industry. Those who chose animal raising made an average profit of $103.49 per student, their total earnings being $136,573.51.

Corn was the most popular grain produced, 467 lads working 4298 acres for this crop. Among the animals swine led with 480 boys raising 5525 hogs and earning a total of $47,948.75. All the animals raised by the young students were of pure-bred stock, and all the grains were of standard varieties selected with care and inspected regularly. The work of the lads was closely supervised. Advice and recommendations for improving efficiency were freely given by expert teachers. What other industry can show such results: generous cash profits for those who are learning it reaped from the actual, practical steps of their own education?

If this Illinois plan should be extended in that State, be adopted in other western commonwealths and worked out successfully on a large scale, it would seem to contain a promise of solving some of the many phases of the agricultural problem independently of any results that may be obtained through experiments of politicians of varying attainments and differing

Editorial Notes

Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles in Massachusetts, is calling upon the police of the State to enforce the law requiring motorists to slow down when approaching pedestrians, who are endeavoring to make their way to the sidewalks. There are unquestionably two sides to the motor courtesy question and the pedestrian has his duties to perform, but impartial judgment on the issue will support the contention of the Massachusetts registrar and that of similar officials in the other states that there has been a serious disregard of the rights of the pedestrian.

And this happened in Massachusetts. A school committeeman was visiting a classroom. After the class had read one of Webster's speeches the visitor asked one boy, "Who was Webster?"

"A statesman," the boy replied.
"But what is a statesman?" the visitor asked.
"A man who goes around making speeches," replied the lad.

"That is not quite right," said the committeeman. "I go around making speeches yet I am not a statesman."

"I know," spoke up a bright little fellow. "A statesman is a man who goes around making good speeches."

Arturo Garcia-Fermenti, the Mexican boy who won the international oratorical contest, says: "Mexico and the United States are to be good friends. It will take time, but understanding of our different types will come and thenpeace." In other words the way to peace is not through trying to force other people's ideas into exactly the same mold as one's own.

Electrical voting machines, which are now being used in several states, can take a count of 200 votes a minute. This is "getting out the vote" with a vengeance.

Needs of the Consular Service

THE legislation known as the Rogers Act, which was enacted in 1924 for the benefit and improvement of the American foreign service, has now been in operation long enough to disclose its advantages and its weaknesses and the extent to which it has really benefited the service especially the consular branch.

nesses and the extent to which it has really benefited the service, especially the consular branch.

The measure, sponsored by John J. Rogers, Representative from Massachusetts, and drawn up largely by Wilbur J. Carr, then director of the consular service, was passed only after a long struggle in the face of the most amazing indifference on the part of congressmen generally, and after many failures. Nor did it comprehend, of course, all that either Mr. Carr or other officials of the foreign service deemed necessary for the improvement of that service; but it did embrace about as much as seemed possible of enactment at the time.

Now, however, it is in order to regard critically what the Rogers Act actually achieved, and especially what is yet necessary to be done in order that the American foreign service may be properly efficient and equal to the constantly increasing demands upon it, and that its members may know the satisfaction with their situation which is vital to the proper functioning of the service.

In some degree they do not at present know that satisfaction, as conversation with them in all parts of the world shows. But so comparatively little need be done in order to insure contentment, and thus a stronger loyalty and a higher zeal, that the situation is not at all serious. Certain changes should, however, be made in the Rogers Act, and it should be supplemented by further beneficiary legislation, none of which would entail any considerable financial outlay.

There is no doubt whatever that the foreign service of the United States has improved immeasurably in a dozen years, Prior to 1915 it practically constituted a system of political "pickings" which made it a joke to the rest of the world and a humiliation to Americans abroad. Yet that system had been carried along since 1856, and more or less ever since the United States had inaugurated a system of foreign representation.

In 1915 the service was brought within the provisions of the civil service, and attempts were made to select men for the several posts who might suitably and efficiently represent the interests of their country. The greatest difficulty encountered in this quest was the extremely low scale of emolument. Another bar was the absence of any pension arrangement by which officers might be enabled to retire after long periods of service.

These two drawbacks to the foreign service as a career the Rogers Act undertook, first of all, to remove. Elaborate provision was made for a retirement fund, and the salary scale was carefully revised. True, the schedule of emolument was not increased as much as either Mr. Carr or anybody else would have liked; but as much alteration and improvement as seemed at all likely of approval by Congress was undertaken.

If this fell a good deal short of the needs as they now

If this fell a good deal short of the needs as they now disclose themselves in many, or most, parts of the world, the fault was neither Mr. Carr's nor Mr. Rogers's, nor that of any official of the service. The fault was the repeated refusal of Congress to look with favor upon any considerable increase in the cost of the service. And this refusal was in turn due to the failure of Congress as a whole to appreciate the growing importance of the foreign service and its resultant needs.

There is reason to believe that that stage of indifference has passed, and that the considerable travels of the American people generally during the past few years, their contact—which has, of course, included that of scores of members of Congress—with the men of the foreign service, have brought about a clearer understanding of what the service is doing, of what even greater work it may well do, and thus of the fact that, like all laborers in a good cause, its representatives are well worthy of their hire.

It is fairly safe to assume, then, that the time is ripe for another consideration by Congress of some of the needs of the foreign service, more especially the consular branch of it. The enactment of the Rogers Bill was, we will admit, a great step forward; but it did not meet, nor was it expected to meet, all the needs; the more especially as those needs have been growing every year and still continue to grow.

The greatest of them is, of course, the economic need. The Rogers measure improved considerably the state of the lower classifications in the consular service at the same time that it determined higher requirements as to qualifications. That it succeeded in improving the service as to qualifications is strongly impressed upon the traveler who visits posts in various parts of the world. There is no doubt at all that America has now, on the whole, a very fine type of man as foreign-service official.

That being the case his economic problem should be rendered less acute for him. And the way that this should be done is by a system of allowances such as are received by the representatives of the other first-class powers. In most cases it will be found that the "base" salaries of American officials and of those, for example, of Great Britain, vary not a great deal. But it will also be found that the various "allowances," designed to meet the necessary expenses of the post, sometimes bring the income of the representatives of Great Britain up to a figure more than twice as large as that paid the American official.

For example, American Consuls-General in London and Paris, the two best-paid posts, receive the very inadequate emolument of $9000 a year, without any allowances whatever. This, incidentally, is $3000 less than was paid prior to the passage of the Rogers Act. And the British Consul-General in New York receives, as a result of various post allowances, in the neighborhood of $25,000 a year. The discrepancy between the salaries of American and British consular representatives is almost as great in several other large cities.

The way to remedy this is the inauguration of a system of allowances, including especially a rental allowance. Nor is this less necessary in many of the smaller posts, especially in the East, where the position of American consul, or even vice-consul, may carry with it a considerable degree of prestige which ought for the sake of America's standing among nations to be maintained, and which obviously cannot be maintained upon, let us say, a salary of $3500 a year.

There is no need to alter the system of base salaries; a proper schedule of allowances will meet the need. And today, with every traveled American, including most congressmen, understanding quite clearly the importance of the foreign service as well as its needs, there ought to be little difficulty in enacting whatever legislation is necessary.

Mirror of World Opinion

"Preserving" in New England

IN SPITE of the canning industry, which has eliminated the old relationships between vegetables and their natural seasons, in spite of modern rapid transit, which conveys the tropic pineapple to our October tables, in spite of the whole machinery of cold storage, refrigerator cars, dry-packing, dehydrating, pickling and pressing, no fatal blow has yet been struck at the ancient New England practice of "home preserving." Let mankind devise a thousand and one ingenious ways to market the lowly tomato and the lofty peach in cans, cartons, cases and containers—his makeshifts will not serve. The instinct of the New England housewife to do her own preserving is inherent in the blood, and all the prodigal contrivances of commerce and industry will not keep Aunt Mary from "putting up" her pears, plums, beets, berries and piccalilli.

These are the days when "the nose knows." Along any quiet residential street (so it is a street with arching elms and flagstone walks) the chance traveler finds the frosty autumn air tinged with an agreeable odor of cooking. It is a complex aroma, grateful to the senses; an aroma compounded of the spices and seasons, of ginger and clove, of peppers red and green, of celery salt, and of all the nine-and-fifty elements of a bountiful harvest. It requires no lively imagination to reconstruct the scene that is obscured by the walls of these houses. Somewhere in the hidden interior there is a kitchen range going full-blast, a sink filled with an amazing miscellany of pots and pans, a table laden with glass jars and rubber rings; and roundabout, on chairs, on shelves, on stools, stand containers as varied as fortune in their shapes and their contents. Some hold fruit, some vegetables, some the grotesque and seemingly illimitable pits, cores, husks and parings rejected and foredoomed in this frenzied judgment day.

That great wizard Thurston could keep seven balls in the air with one hand and produce rabbits from a hat with the other; but he was an amateur beside those New England prestidigitators, the housewives in their preserving days. Modern industrial efficiency has its darling theory of one thing at a time and two men to do it; but Aunt Mary would sniff scornfully at such tidy precision. Full well she knows that the world cannot proceed upon a measured beat. Nine things at a time is her rule; ten, if she can handle them—ten, not counting the tomatoes, which will have to stew along and look out for themselves.

"Now goes the husband to the stubble-field to mourn the ruined year." So runs an old poem; and the poem misses the point. Why does the husband go to the fields when harvest is over and nothing remains to be done? Not to mourn, but simply because he knows better than to go into the house. Brave man that he is, he will pull down a team of runaway horses, tether an angry bull or scale the dizziest loft to pitch fodder; but he is not daredevil enough to face Aunt Mary among her four hundred pans and her thousand "lightnin' jara".

But no scoffing! Next January, when the work-weary male comes plodding through knee-deep drifts, to toast his ears and stamp the snow from his feet, he will be thrilled to remember this tumultaous season; for there upon his dinner table, smiling at the bleak surroundings of "the dead dark and deep of winter," will be the golden peach of autumn and the very substance of summer. Then will he know the full measure of the necromancy that is wrought in the October kitchen.—Providence Journal.

"Lightening the Farmer's Burdens"
To The Christian Science Monitor:

In your editorial entitled, "Lightening the Farmer's Burdens," you state that the "underlying fallacy of nearly all suggestions from the cities" is their failure to recognize that the problem is not one of increasing production, but of disposing of a surplus that forces prices down to a point that makes farming so unprofitable, etc. May I offer counter-arguments?

I believe that there is a widespread misapprehension on this question. What the farmer does not understand is not the supposed danger of increased production and its resultant depressing effect on prices, at all. What he needs to learn, according to the most experienced experts of our state agricultural colleges, is the basic economic proposition underlying Henry Ford's success, namely, that radically increased per unit (or per acre) production, with ensuing radically lowered per-acre labor cost, is the key to his immediate situation.

And this statement involves no unequal comparison of farmer economics with industrial economics. The farmer's friends do not understand, or else, being politically visioned, they ignore the fact that intensive cultivation (which includes intensive fertilization), plus judicious reduction in areas given to various crops, together with improved machinery, co-operative marketing, etc., will produce a great increase per aere coincidently with greatly reduced per-unit costs, resulting in real net profits—and reduced per-unit costs, resulting in real net profite—and no increase in total production at all.

Every farmer can control this sliding scale of total production by means of judicious crop diversification, but most important, can control per-unit and total costs by radically increasing per-unit production. This is the decisive root factor in farmer economics, but my observation leads me to say that the farmers as a whole have not yet learned it. Profits are the difference between production costs and selling prices—not a government subsidy or "equalization" mirage.

These are not gratuitous statements nor "plausible theories," but pure and simple facts which the southern, eastern and central state agricultural colleges can substantiate voluminously. Anyone who has been in close touch with the findings of these colleges for years can vouch for these statements. These very ideas and results are being demonstrated constantly by a minority of enlightened farmers. The majority of farmers, however, are still too satisfied with old, worn-out, average farming methods, even though some of them resort to appeals to Washington for help every little while. So far, American farmers have only "mined" the soils; truly efficient farming by intensive cultivation, fertilization, etc., is only beginning.

farmers. The majority of farmers, however, are still too satisfied with old, worn-out, average farming methods, even though some of them resort to appeals to Washington for help every little while. So far, American farmers have only "mined" the soils; truly efficient farming by intensive cultivation, fertilization, etc., is only beginning.

As in every other business, the farmer's profit is to be found in only one place, namely, in the margin between operation costs and selling prices. In his case the farmer can safely and surely widen the gap between these two factors only by radically increasing per-acre production and thereby radically reducing per-acre cost. Why will there be further overproduction when he can always diversify, or even pasture, part of his land? Concentration, intensive production, is the keynote of modern production

The farmer's burden could be greatly lightened, also, by reduction of his country-wide overload of state and county taxes, which constitute one of the most grievous phases of his "economic disadvantage." His best, most practical and mmediate solution, however, the purely economic solution, lies in his own hands: It is, the largest possible production per-acre unit of labor or production cost.
